PAPER TOWELS:

- ✓ Most Hygienic
- ✓ User Preferred
- ✓ Superior OH&S

The facts are in and the highest levels of hand drying hygiene and user satisfaction are not provided by jets, but by paper towels.

A recent University study¹ found that paper towels consistently out performed all other drying techniques, especially with regard to bacteria left on the palms and fingertips.

In another study², hot air blowers and jets have been found to actually increase the bacterial count on the fingertips by an average of 42%. This compared to a decrease of up to 76% after washing and drying hands with a paper towel.

When you add to this poor hygiene performance, both the extra time taken and the slip risk as wet hands are transferred to air jets and blowers, it's small wonder that 86% of Food Manufacturing Facilities³ provide paper towels for employees.
